

College of Arts & Sciences Course Overload Request

Undergraduates may take no more than 18 semester hours during a regular semester, or more than 7 semester hours in any one given summer session except with the approval of an Academic Advisor. To request this special approval, students must fill out this Course Overload Request Form and submit it to their academic advisor as a saved PDF via email. The advisor will determine whether or not a Course Overload is warranted.

When advisors approve an Overload, they will forward this completed form to the College of Arts and Sciences Advising Center for processing. When the new enrollment limit has been applied to the student's registration record, both student and advisor will be notified via email. If advisors deny a request for an Overload, they will explain their decision via email to the students' email listed on the request form.
